Tell-tale signs of sudden cardiac arrest

if someone is having a sudden cardiac arrest, you may see the person suddenly collapse and lose consciousness. You may also find them unconscious and unable to respond when you call or shake them. They may not be breathing, or have an abnormal breathing pattern. If you check, you usually can't find a pulse. The person's skin also may become dark or blue from lack of oxygen. The person may not move, or their movements may look like a seizure (spasms).

WE'VE GONE PLASTIC FREE

AlSCO Uniforms/Fresh & Clean have recently made the switch from plastic First Aid modules, to fully recyclable cardboard ones!

By our estimate, this will save 36,000 trays and 750kgs of plastic each year! This message is also conveyed on each module. The modules also have a QR code located on the side of them, which will take you directly to our First Response landing page on our website where you can find out more detailed information on the services we provide.

ALSCO UNIFORMS REPURPOSING

In terms of charitable donations, nothing makes us prouder than our gifting program which began with the repurposing of useful First Aid products that have reached their nominal expiry date.

Since then, AlSCO Uniforms has gone on to support a wide range of non for profit, sporting and local community organisations. We provide support to over 70 community organisations including key partners like Medical Aid Abroad, Ronald McDonald House, Auckland City Mission, and UsedFULLY.
